PERSONALITY OF COL. SCHWARTZKOPF STANDS OUT IN THE LINDBERGH CASE

Judge Unlikely to Permit Broadcasting of the Trial — Chief of New Jersey State Police Gave All He Had in Effort to Solve the Case — Biggest Job He Ever Tackled

This is the eleventh of a series of 12 articles on the Lindbergh case which again is being projected into the spotlight next month by the approaching trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Dec. 21.—(INS)—"Schwarzkopf." Ever since the Lindbergh kidnapping crime "broke," this name—referring to Colonel H. Norman Schwarzkopf—has recurred thousands of times, in and out of the newspapers.

Schwarzkopf was then, and still is, superintendent of the New Jersey state police and as such assumed charge of the difficult task of solving the kidnapping and murder of little Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr. Colonel Schwarzkopf gave "everything he had" to the biggest job he ever tackled as a police official. He spent countless sleepless nights working on the case. He has been indefatigable in running down the thousands of clues.

If the state of New Jersey is able to build a strong murder case against Bruno Richard Hauptmann at the latter's forthcoming trial in Flemington, a great deal of the credit will have to go to Schwarzkopf.

Schwarzkopf—a "West Point man" and a world war veteran—is a modest, self-effacing official. He is only 39 years old. He is of medium height, sturdy build, light-haired and blue-eyed. He never has ballyhooed himself during the long Lindbergh investigation.

He built the New Jersey state police, comprising more than 200 officers and troopers, to a high state of efficiency. He was named superintendent of this organization in 1921 and under his guidance it ranks with any state constabulary in the United States.

Shortly after his appointment, Schwarzkopf visited the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police, and various state police units in this country. He gathered information during these trips which he utilized in bringing his organization up to its present point of efficiency.

Colonel Schwarzkopf was born in Newark, N. J., August 29, 1895. He was graduated from the Newark schools and from Freehold Military Academy. He was appointed to the United States Military Academy in June 1913 and was graduated from West Point in 1917. Leaving West Point he was appointed to the Second Cavalry, Fort Ethan Allen, Vt.

He served overseas and achieved a distinguished record for bravery in the world war. On July 1, 1917, he accompanied the 76th field artillery, 2nd division, overseas. He commanded Battery D. And he was in charge of the battalion during the winter of 1918.

Schwarzkopf saw service in Chateau Thierry, along the Aisne-Marne front and took part in the fighting during the St. Mihiel and Argonne-Meuse offensives and in the battles in the Sedan sectors. He was with the division during the occupation of Germany until August 1919. He was then transferred to army transportation service, St. Nazaire, France, as police and sabotage officer in command of freight and lumber yards.

Upon his return home he was engaged by L. Bamberger Company, Newark, as traffic manager. His term as superintendent of the New Jersey state police expires June 7, 1936. His home is in Princeton, N. J. He is a close friend of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. Schwarzkopf is married and the father of three children.

Governor A. Harry Moore of New Jersey is another man whose name has figured quite prominently in the Lindbergh case. The governor left no stone unturned in co-operating with Schwarzkopf and other police officials

YULETIDE SUPPER IS ENJOYED BY FLEETWINGS

Employees Served Tempting Menu, Sing Carols and Hear Brief Talks

NOVEL DECORATIONS

Gathered about the festive board, 83 men and women, including all employees of Fleetwings, Incorporated, participated in a Yuletide supper last evening. The joyous affair occurred in the cafeteria of the plant, and the holiday menu was served at 5.15.

Carl deGanahl, president of Fleetwings, Inc., was host of the evening, and for an hour and a half the group made merry.

Mr. deGanahl addressed the gathering briefly, as did also other officials of the company. A representative of the employees was called upon, and expressed appreciation of the pleasant evening, and of the activities here since operations were started by the aircraft concern.

Christmas songs were indulged in, amidst an attractive Yuletide setting. A large tree was decked with trimmings made from pieces of stainless steel used in the shop.

SMITH OUT FOR RECORD

Burbank, Cal., Dec. 21.—Sir Charles Kingsford Smith, who has twice flown the trans-Atlantic airways between Australia and the United States, today took off on what may become an attempt to break the existing air record between Los Angeles and New York. Smith, accompanied by Harry E. Walker, California rancher, left the field at 4:58 a. m., Pacific standard time. The big Lockheed, Itaire plane, "Lady Southern Cross," which carried Smith on his last trans-Pacific flight, carried 300 gallons of gasoline for the 750-horsepower Wasp motor.

HUNT BANDITS IN MONTGOMERY COUNTY

Philadelphia, Dec. 21.—Adjacent Montgomery county, site of palatial mansions maintained by the wealthiest residents of this metropolitan area, was being scoured by Department of Justice Agents today for a clue to the whereabouts of Robert Mals and his mob of desperadoes now credited with the $48,500 robbery of the Philadelphia Electric Company.

Finding of the get-away car used in the sensational daylight robbery, in West Laurel Hill Cemetery, Montgomery County, led authorities to believe the outlaws have established headquarters in some isolated section near the cemetery.

Simultaneously with this belief, police privately expressed the fear the mob, while "lying low," may plan to kidnap some millionaire or relative of the latter in the area. Meanwhile, in anticipation of future forays by the band, all banks in Philadelphia and environs were being closely watched by augmented guards.

Captain of Detectives J. Shooey Malone, whose sleuthing was responsible for raids last week which resulted in the arrest of five members of the gang and seizure of a number of guns and ammunition, today asserted there no longer was any doubt who perpetrated yesterday's $48,500 robbery. "It was one of Mals' jobs," the detective said, tersely.

EDWARDS MAKES APPEAL

Philadelphia, Dec. 21.—An appeal from his conviction and death sentence for the "American tragedy" murder of Freda McKechnie, his child-hood sweetheart, was filed in Pennsylvania Supreme Court here today on behalf of Robert Allen Edwards, youthful coal mine inspector who was found guilty of first-degree murder in Luzerne county and was condemned to death in the electric chair.

Today's appeal, financed by friends, neighbors and former school companions of Edwards, was made returnable by the Supreme Court on the fourth Monday in January. Counsel for the young convicted slayer presented the appeal to the high tribunal.

APPEAL FOR RETURN OF COAT LEFT IN CHURCH FOR A NEEDY CHILD

Every so often an individual who is daubed the "meanest thief" robs a church poor-box, steals the widow's mite, or robs the dead. But the meanest thief in Bristol committed a deed as bad as the worst of these, when he stole a coat which was to keep some poor little child from shivering and perhaps contracting a deadly cold this winter.

Not satisfied with stealing the coat almost from the back of a child at Christmas time this meanest thief went further and stole the coat from a church building where it had been left to be distributed as a gift from Santa.

Members of the Methodist Sunday School class taught by Miss May Smoyer when they entered their class room in the Methodist Church last night, found that the room had been broken into and robbed. Among the articles missing are a coat just purchased for a child, several games and a dozen oranges. A plea is made to the person taking the coat to return it and no questions will be asked. The coat may be returned to Miss Smoyer who resides at 526 Linden street or it can be returned to the Methodist parsonage. No questions will be asked. Now a final plea is made to the one who took the coat to give it back and make some poor child happy. Make up your mind now that you will not be guilty of stealing a coat from the back of a poor little girl.

Members of Miss Smoyer's class have been working every night getting together clothing and toys for distribution among needy children. They have been working in one of the rooms of the Methodist Sunday School and when they reached there last night were surprised to find that someone had been mean enough to rob one of Santa's storerooms.

Please return the coat.

RESOLUTION

The members of the Bristol Consolidated Fire Department desire to place on record, their appreciation of the services of the late lamented, George W. Buckley, and their deep sense of his loss.

By the death of Mr. Buckley, November 22nd, this department is deprived of the services and active interest of one who has been a most faithful official of the department since its organization.

To the matters that fell to his duties in the office of first assistant chief, he gave that careful and earnest attention, that was so characteristic of him. His sterling qualities, which endeared him to all with whom he came in contact, causes his death to be felt by the members of the Department as a personal bereavement and they sympathize deeply with his family, to whom they offer their tenderest condolence, and earnestly invoke for them the support of higher consolation.

Resolved, That a copy of this minute be sent to the family and that it be published in the local paper.

CLIFFORD L. ANDERSON,
President.

AIM TO PREVENT ALL BLAZES HERE DURING HOLIDAYS

"We Don't Want To Have A Single Fire," Says J. L. McGee

"DON'T'S" ARE GIVEN

Want Happy Holidays For All Homes; Caution Asked

It is the aim of the Department of Public Safety to prevent all fires here during the holiday season. "We don't want to have a single fire," says Superintendent of Public Safety James L. McGee. "With the full co-operation of all residents here such a record can be made."

In warning of the danger of holiday fires Superintendent McGee calls attention to the perils of amateur wiring for Christmas celebrations and of possible tragedy as an aftermath.

A list of "don'ts" is given as follows:

For Residences
Don't look for Christmas tree ornaments in the loft, cellar or closets with a lighted candle or matches.
Don't place lighted candles on Christmas trees.
Don't use cotton to represent snow—use asbestos.

Don't permit toys, operated by gasoline, alcohol or other inflammable liquids, near the Christmas tree.
Don't use celluloid motion picture films in the so-called toy motion picture machines.

Don't forget that Christmas tree becomes dry and more inflammable every day it is in the house.
Don't forget to have a chemical extinguisher or bucket of water handy, as a dry Christmas tree bursts into a quick flame when lighted.

For Churches
Don't permit the use of candles by children who are dressed in flimsy gowns to represent fairies. At least two deaths have been caused in this way by children taking part in Christmas entertainments.

Don't have open flames on the stage.
Don't permit gas jets and electric bulbs to be draped with flimsy material.
Don't turn all the lights in the auditorium out for so-called Christmas stage effects.

Don't permit chairs or people in the aisles at an entertainment.

For Stores
Don't allow rubbish to accumulate. Remove it daily.
Don't use inflammable materials for decorations.

Don't permit laxity by employees in charge of fire regulations.
Don't forget the fire drill.
Don't allow exit doors or passageways to fire towers and fire escapes to be blocked by stock or counters.

Two Cemeteries Are Also Aided By Will of Deceased

FILE OTHER ESTATES

Arthur Van Pelt's Estate Is Bequeathed To His Daughter

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 21.—Leaving an estate of $6000, John Afflerbach, of this place, directed that the residue of his estate be given to the Reformed and Lutheran churches of Riegelsville, according to his will probated in the Register of Wills' office, here, this week.

For the benefit of the Kellers' Church cemetery, he created a $200 trust fund, and for the benefit of the Riegelsville cemetery a $1000 trust fund was established.

Letters of administration in the estate of Arthur Van Pelt, who was found dead in his home, 182 West Court street, here, October 17, were granted to a daughter, Marianne Van Pelt Franklin, 14401 Milverson road, Cleveland, Ohio, amounting to $50.

Three children, Mrs. Frank K. Swain, of Font Hill, here; Mrs. Arthur Pickering and Wilson Long, of Gardenville, were named heirs of the $16,500 estate left by their father, William Long, of Gardenville, with reservations.

The testator, who named Wilson Long executor, created a $100 trust fund in the Doylestown National Bank & Trust Company for the benefit of the Mechanicsville Cemetery. The late Gardenville farmer's personal estate was valued at $15,000, real estate holdings totaled $1500.

Mrs. Ella C. Weaver, of Perkasio, was bequeathed the $9500 estate of her husband, Dr. Milton E. Weaver. Real estate holdings amounted to $8000, and the personal estate was valued at $1500.

Two children, Wilson George and Jennie Yeakley, both of whom were named executors, will inherit the $8000, and the personal estate was valued at $1800, and real estate holdings, $800.

With individual bequests of $1000 to Lottie Shaw Leidy, and $500 to Robert Kline, the $2500 estate of Mary G. Shaw, of Quakertown, will be distributed among relatives. Household possessions were also bequeathed to Robert and Oliver Kline.

A son, Herbert, was bequeathed the $2750 estate of his father, Romana Singer Harding, of Perkasio.

Various relatives will inherit the $1200 estate of Paul Berrer, of Bristol, who appointed Joseph L. Carroll executor.

Three children, two sons and a daughter, will share the estate of Rachel Carly, of Riegelsville, estimated to be $1750. They are Dr. Harry Carly, of Freelandburg and Raymond Carly, of Easton, and Ethel Carly, of Riegelsville.

In the estate of Anna R. Howell, of Morrisville, letters of administration were granted to L. A. Howell, amounting to $2500. Letters of administration in the estate of William B. Ralsner, of Bridgeton, were granted to Edwin Ralsner, amounting to $75. Willis F. Moyer and Pearl F. Mohr were granted the letters of administration in the estate of Abraham G. Moyer, of Quakertown, amounting to $16,900. Letters of administration in the estate of John C. Watson, of Lower Makefield, were granted to A. Y. Watson, amounting to $100.

In the estate of Earle O. Stout, of Morrisville, letters of administration were granted to Margaret E. B. Stout, amounting to $100. John Pawlaga was granted the letters of administration in the estate of Maria Pawlaga, of Bedminster, amounting to $875.

John and Chester M. Frantz were granted the letters of administration in the estate of Alfred S. Frantz, of Trumbauersville, amounting to $7500. Clarence R. Strunk was granted the letters of administration in the estate of Warren C. Brey, of Quakertown, amounting to $350. Letters of administration in the estate of Chester S. Carly, of Riegelsville, were granted to Raymond Carly, amounting to $1950.

INCONSISTENCY

We probably understand the Japanese as little as the Japanese understand us; and to judge by the statement of the newspaper Jiji Shimpō that the United States intends to build "an overwhelmingly superior navy both in the Atlantic and the Pacific for the subjugation of the world," Japan has a very poor idea of the aspirations of this country.

But do the Japanese really believe that such are our intentions? The attitude of their negotiators at London indicates otherwise. For if the naval limitation treaties are denounced, and we are free to build any amount of tonnage, and arm it without restriction, the opportunity to construct an "overwhelmingly superior" navy in both oceans is far greater than it is today under the agreements. Yet it is the Japanese who want to denounce the treaties, opening the way to a naval construction race in which, if our desires are what the Japanese say they are, Japan is sure to be worried.

If the Japanese sincerely believe that our objects are as the Jiji Shimpō and other newspapers state, Japan's best guaranty of safety would be to stick to the present ratios and limitations, and insist on the sanctity of the nine-power pact, and the Pacific treaty.

FOOLISHNESS

The Massachusetts public work department has asked the legislature to enact a law requiring that automobiles in the state be equipped with a mechanical device to prevent them from running more than 50 miles an hour.

It is an idea that should lead logically to the requirement of such aids to law observance as mechanical tire-deflators for cars parked at the curb more than 30 minutes or left-turn indicators with loud-speaker attachment.

The Massachusetts notion has little appeal as a means of promoting highway safety. Every motorist knows that even the most careful driver sometimes finds himself in situations where the use of all the speed his car is capable of is the best or perhaps only way to avert accident.

The proposal to resort to mechanical speed limits sounds like the counsel of desperation, which, indeed, it is. It is a forecast of what the national motoring public, and the motor industry as well, must expect to be faced with, unless safer means are found and made effective for reducing traffic accident mortality.

Those fighting cocks of the Balkans have occasioned a lot of trouble in their time.

Well, if the United States is half way on its reach for recovery, it may be said that the first half is the harder.

Unwearable paper has been invented in Japan but if you think treaties will be written on it you are a little silly.

The accident list indicates that many drivers overlook the fact that this is the period calling for more than usual care.

Looking back over the year, its leading humorist still seems to be the Kansas 'phone subscriber on a party line, who began his conversations, "Hello, everybody."

Personality of Colonel Schwartzkopf Stands Out In The Lindbergh Case

In the efforts to solve the most despicable crime ever committed in this state.

The governor, realizing the tremendous public interest in the forthcoming trial of Hauptmann, is eager to see that the press has ample facilities to "cover" the trial in Flemington. With this idea in view he appointed his Commissioner of Labor John Tooley, a former newspaper man, to co-operate with the press and work with Sheriff John Curtiss who has charge of the Hunterdon County Courthouse where the trial will be held.

Sheriff Curtiss, a genial and efficient official, is doing all he can to perfect arrangements. He met representatives of the press a number of times and listened patiently to complaints of cramped quarters. He made many adjustments in the courthouse.

At Curtiss' direction part of the spectators' seats have been taken out of the courtroom to make room for the working press. A balcony overlooking the courtroom was given over entirely to the press.

Requests for press seats have come in to Sheriff Curtiss from all over the nation. Some New York city newspapers requested as many as 12 seats. This, of course, is out of the question and the sheriff has indicated that four seats will be the maximum assigned to any organization or newspaper.

A telegraph room has been set up on the second floor of the courthouse, just back of the courtroom balcony. There, during the trial, many thousands of words will be clicked out daily over the wires to all parts of the world.

Press associations have made detailed arrangements for covering the trial. The full "Q" and "A" copy will be obtained by them and in addition they will have their star writers dashing off the "running" account of the trial.

Justice Thomas W. Trenchard has not yet made a definite ruling on whether or not any photographers will be admitted for the taking of pictures. It may be that a restricted number of photographers will be allowed to take certain pictures at specified times. At the present writing indications are that the judge will not permit any radio broadcasting.

(Tomorrow Mr. Kilgallen, in his concluding article, will describe the lawyers on both sides at the impending trial of Hauptmann which promises to be one of the greatest legal dramas of the generation.)

HELL "GO STRAIGHT"

PRAGUE — (INS) — Martin Korim, 75, found guilty of murdering and robbing a man in a wood, promised the judge that when he came out he would "go straight" and begin a new life. His sentence was 25 years.

GOOD FISHING ASHORE

GENOA — (INS) — On the west coast, south of Genoa, millions of sardines were thrown up on to the shore by a storm and the fishermen had only to walk there to collect them in large baskets.

"BEACH BEAUTY" by ARTHUR SHUMWAY

CHAPTER XXXI

Kay had the doctor drop her at the dock and went aboard the Commander III. Fortunately, Harrow was there. She walked up to him and looked him directly in the eye, smiling a cold, humorless smile.

"Are you satisfied now?" she asked.

Harrow grinned at her quizzically. It flashed through her mind that he must be a remarkably good actor.

"Of course, you don't know," she said superciliously. "You haven't even the faintest idea."

Harrow's tone was of patience and good humor.

"I'm afraid I haven't," he said. Kay kept her eyes on his, searching, trying to penetrate his pleasantness and probe into his mind. But she had to admit the futility of it.

"Pete was shot," she said. Harrow's face changed immediately. His mouth became thinner, harder; his eyes narrowed; his jaw came forward.

"He was?" he said. "When?" His manner of amused patience was gone now; he was the same Earl Harrow she had seen on several occasions lately, one of them the time he fired at the prowler in the hibiscus whom he had believed was Pete.

"About an hour or so ago."

"Where? He was badly hurt?"

"In our yard. He was hit in the head. The doctor says it isn't a deep wound. But he has a concussion. Unless, maybe he isn't telling me the whole truth."

Harrow began to chew his lower lip, staring hard at the dock. Then, his dark eyes rose and looked into hers. "And you asked me if I was satisfied," he said, dully.

"Well, are you?" She could not resist being cruel. If Harrow had had anything to do with the shooting of Pete he deserved more cruelty than this.

He looked at her steadily, then sighed and took out a cigaret.

"I suppose you're right," he said. Before she knew what he meant, he added:

"But it happens I knew nothing about it. I've had one of the boys keep an eye on your Mr. Ryan and that's all. He was in no danger. But it seems somebody shot him. Kay, if ever I told the truth in my life I'm telling it now. I don't know who shot him. But I'll tell you one thing: I'm going to find out."

"I came to you," Kay explained, "before telling the police the whole story. If you asked me why, I couldn't tell you. But I did, I suppose, though, they'll have to know it."

"I'll speak to the police," Harrow said gently. "Otherwise you'll be in an awkward situation."

She looked at him quickly, but he was regarding the moonlit water as if it might give him a solution for some complex problem.

"I'll go on home then," she said. "You can do whatever you think best. All I know is that they're putting a special guard on my house and they're going to want to talk to me again."

"I'll take care of it, Kay," he assured her. "Let me drive you home."

"Thank you. I think the doctor is still waiting."

She looked down and saw the coupe. "You needn't bother," she said. "I'll ride with him since he's waited."

And she left the boat as perplexed as ever by Harrow's behavior. Whether she hated the man, whether she liked him, trusted him or suspected him, she could not truthfully say. She was ready to expect anything.

When Kay had gone, Harrow found Spike Winch.

"Spike," he said. "Beat it to the hospital and see how that boy is doing. Guarantee the bill and see that he gets every attention he needs. And mind now, no word is to leak out to Kay or to Ryan himself."

Spike looked a moment at Harrow, chewing slowly on his stub of a cigar. "I get it," he drawled.

Before she was through breakfast the next morning, Earl Harrow appeared at Kay's. She received him pleasantly enough, but with no real cordiality. And he could sense her attitude. It made him doubly polite and solicitous.

"Well, Kay," he said, "I've seen the chief of police."

She looked at him for answer.

"It's all right," Harrow explained. "You don't have to worry about a thing. And Pete's all right. He'll merely be laid up a while."

"Oh, you inquired?" Perhaps there was the slightest tinge of sarcasm in the question.

"Yes," Harrow said, "I did."

"Well, it was very nice of you."

"Quite all right. Now, I don't think you need fear any more bother. I'm sure affairs will be pretty well in hand from now on."

She could not help thinking: Yes, now that Pete's out of the way. But she said: "Thank you very much."

Harrow stood looking at her a moment, on the point of smiling, as if choosing his speech carefully before delivering it. Finally he said:

"Really, whether you believe me or not, I'm tremendously sorry that our association has caused you so much worry and trouble. I assure you I had no intention that it should."

"It's all right."

"But it isn't. I'm quite fond of you, you know, Kay, and trouble of any kind is the last thing I want you to have. Well—"

He smiled and turned to go.

"Thank you for stopping by," she said. "And for inquiring about Pete."

"I'd like to see you sometime," he said. "I've only a day or so. We've been putting off sailing so long it's getting ridiculous. If I'm to get my cruise in I can't stay any longer."

"You have been here quite a while," she said. Having said it, she wondered if it sounded cruel; also, if she cared.

Harrow stopped, halfway through the door, and turned to her.

"There's something might interest you," he said. "Just casually."

"Yes?" My lawyer is arranging for a divorce.

"Oh," she said, as if the fact were of no interest. But she wondered what was coming.

"I've a strange feeling that it may not be wise," Harrow continued. "My wife and I—well, we've never been exactly happy with each other. She does very nicely and I've been getting along after my fashion. I haven't seen her since I bumped into her two years ago in the Adlon in Berlin."

He grinned boyishly and, against her will, Kay felt drawn toward him. A sense of pity, perhaps, she told herself.

"We've gone along," he continued, "with an arrangement that's been more or less satisfactory. She doesn't want anything but the sort of life she leads—travel, admiration, absolute security and freedom of movement, plus a certain amount of—shall we say, luxury? And I've been protected to a certain extent. I've been as careful as possible, and women have known no such thing as marriage has been possible."

Earl Harrow paused and smiled a little guiltily.

"That sounds terribly conceited, doesn't it?"

"No," Kay said. "I think I can understand in your case."

"Do you? Well, that's the story. But now I'm getting my divorce. I've had every opportunity and it won't be hard. Of course, my wife won't suffer a bit by the new arrangement."

"But you'll have lost your—your protection," Kay ventured.

"True," he sighed.

He started out again. "But, I'm afraid I'm boring you. One never should foist his domestic affairs onto anyone else. Especially upon a young, unmarried girl. Probably all sounds a little cheap and sordid to you, I suppose?"

"No," Kay said quietly, "it doesn't."

"That's good then," he said with the air of a man who wants to be alone and forget a subject immediately. "Well, I'll run on. I'll keep in touch with you, at least?"

It seemed to be a question. "All right," she said.

After he had gone Kay sat down and looked out upon the river. She tried to analyze her feelings; tried to understand the present, mysterious situation involving them all, Harrow, Pete and herself. It was no use; two facts remained, two apparently irreconcilable facts: she liked Harrow as much as she ever had liked any man, and she did not trust him.

As soon as she could, she rode out to the hospital to see Pete. When told he was not yet allowed visitors, she began to suspect acute danger, but the hospital superintendent assured her such procedure was customary in the case of a brain concussion. She had to be satisfied with that.

She was about to leave when suddenly the material side of the situation occurred to her. She went to the desk and asked the girl, whom she knew well, what arrangement was to be made about Pete's bill.

The girl smiled. "Don't worry about that," she said. "It's all taken care of."

"It is?"

The girl nodded. Her expression invited no further question, but Kay persisted. "By whom?" she asked.

"I really couldn't tell you," the girl said, "but it's all fixed. You needn't worry about it at all."

No amount of questioning at the desk got her any farther, so she went to the doctor's office and asked him.

"I was told not to mention it," he said, "but I didn't make any promise and you're a pretty good friend of mine, Kay. It was Harrow."

"Harrow?"

The doctor nodded.

Kay went out of his office more bewildered than ever. If Earl Harrow had had Pete shot, why would he be paying his hospital bills? Or, if he had intended only to disable Pete, why had he picked such a drastic and dangerous way as having some gunman shoot him in the head? How could he have known the exact effect of the wound? How could he have put such trust in the gunman's aim? No, that was all too impossible.

Kay did a lot of thinking that day. She deliberately avoided everyone by riding her bicycle far down the beach, hiding in a hollow between two ridges of sand in the dunes and sunbathing without a suit. As she lay in the warm, soft sand and felt the fierce, yet pleasant heat of the Florida sun draw at her bare skin, she turned the affair over in her mind, over and over.

Harrow, then, couldn't be so bad after all? But if he hadn't been responsible for shooting Pete, who had? And why had Harrow made such a point of announcing that he was getting his divorce? Only one reason seemed apparent, but that was hard to believe.

The day passed without any further light upon the situation and the night passed and still Kay could find no real peace of mind. At the hospital next morning, the answer was the same: Pete could see no one.

Kay scarcely could believe that when the bullet had felled Pete she had been considering the idea of eloping with him to Guatemala. She knew now that such a step would be impossible. When Pete recovered and was able to go and claim his job, she could not go with him under the circumstances. Why this was, she could not discover for herself, but she knew it was true. And she knew that if she did go she would be acting both unwisely and unjustly. This was not a matter to be settled as simply as by running away with Pete and taking refuge in what would be probably a hard life in the tropics.

That evening a picture on the front page of the Daytona Beach newspaper caught her eye. It was of the actress, Carlotta Vestra, a tall, dark woman of strange beauty. The headline above the picture was: ACTRESS WILL WED PRINCE.

Kay read the story beneath. Carlotta Vestra, the brilliant American actress, now in Juan les Pins, France, had announced her engagement to Prince Serge Balizani whose family owned vast holdings in the Caucasus. It would be Carlotta Vestra's second marriage, the Prince's first. The actress' first husband had been Allan MacGregor, of the London stage. She had been an Earl Harrow protegee and her name often had been linked with that of the American producer. Harrow, interviewed aboard his yacht, the Commander III, in Daytona Beach, had made no further comment than that he "wished Carlotta all the happiness in the world."

Kay stared long at the picture of the lovely woman Earl Harrow had lost. How long, she wondered, had he known of this affair with the Prince? What bearing had it had on his attitude toward her? What would he say when she next saw him?

FRANCE ENTERS 1935 WITH PARLIAMENTARY GOVERNMENT UNIMPAIRED BY '34 TURMOIL

Shows Determination To Stick To The Gold Standard

By William Parker

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, Dec. 20—(INS)—Determined to stay on the gold standard and, as well, maintain the parliamentary form of government at all costs, France was today looking forward to 1935 and trying to forget its trials and tribulations of 1934.

Rioting and bloodshed, financial scandals and government crises marked the early months of 1934. In October, when the country was settling down to a tranquil autumn, it was plunged into turmoil again by the assassination of King Alexander, of Yugoslavia, and France's Foreign Minister Barthou at Marseilles October 9th.

In international politics, France's outstanding achievement was that of bringing Russia into the League of Nations. During 1934 France, too, succeeded in getting her Little Entente allies—Rumania and Yugoslavia, to sign a non-aggression, mutual assistance pact with Turkey and Greece.

During the year France continued its efforts to conclude an eastern Locarno pact between Russia, Poland, Germany and itself. This would be a mutual assistance pact which would have the effect of increasing France's security.

Definite steps were taken for a Southeastern and Mediterranean pact, to include its own country, Italy, Yugoslavia, Greece and Turkey.

The situation between Germany and France remained unchanged during the year and had, toward the end of 1934 become somewhat more acute because of the Saar problem.

Since the great war France and Italy have been pretty much at opposite ends in their foreign policy and gestures made by France on several occasions in years past have met with no success, but more determined efforts were initiated in 1934 and with hope of fulfillment.

The military policy of France, in the year past was characterized by the increased mechanization of the army and the hastening to completion of the Rhine fortifications, and the reinforcement of the air and naval forces. It is rather generally conceded that France is in a position to go to war immediately if attacked.

While its external problems have occupied no small part of the Government's time, its troubles at home have been acute. In 11 months there have been four governments. The government of Chautemps fell because of the Stavisky financial scandal, which culminated in Stavisky's suicide near Chamonix early in the year.

The new government formed by Daladier lasted only a few days and fell by reason of the bloody and deadly rioting when thousands of war veterans and young monarchists sought to march on the Chamber of Deputies in February. Next came the government of 70-year-old "Smiling Gaston" Doumergue, who was premier before the war. His great affability, and the fact that he had been summoned to the Chamber of Deputies in February. Next came the government of 70-year-old "Smiling Gaston" Doumergue, who was premier before the war. His great affability, and the fact that he had been summoned to the Chamber of Deputies in February.

The government by Flandin, a member of the Chamber of Deputies and a prominent lawyer was really a mere shuffling of names and ministries, with Doumergue retiring again to private life, and Tardieu not being included as minister without portfolio.

With France the largest country of the world still observing the gold standard, it stood by the gold bloc countries of Europe during the year by giving financial aid and maintaining exchange rates.

No steps were taken to pay off any part of the debt France owes America. The attitude of the Flandin government toward the debt question was that it was not considered by France a dead issue, but that it would come up for settlement along with other international problems, including stabilization of money.

The French internal economic situation has been one of a continued slowing down of business. At the beginning of 1934, coinciding with the February riots there was a large flight of gold from the country but as the year wore on this gold returned. The economic situation by the end of the year was stagnating and the government of Premier Flandin had framed a strong program covering not only the economic aspect of the country, but Communist and Fascist movements as well.

"The government is strong enough to have internal peace... without dictatorial notions," said Premier Flandin in a radio broadcast. Continuing he said:

"The government is going to see to it that business is accorded greater credit facilities with, or if necessary, without the aid of the banks. World prices expressed in gold are tending to catch up with French prices... and the process of deflation has practically reached its end in France."

1934 A YEAR OF RECOVERY AND PROGRESS IN BRITAIN

Reduced Unemployment and Lower Taxes Are Prospect for King's Jubilee Year

By Charles A. Smith
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Dec. 21 — (INS) — While 1934 witnessed Government crises, financial collapses, labor unrest, attempted revolutions and military coup d'etats and the assassination of statesmen and rulers in many European and world countries, it proved on the whole to be a fortunate year for Great Britain.

And if the present encouraging signs are any indication, 1935 should be even better.

Virtually alone among European powers, Britain went through the year without witnessing changes in her Government, without having her citizens worried by warnings of financial and economic disaster, and with the official statistics recording a slow but steady decline in unemployment and an improvement in trade.

Even in the sporting world, 1934 saw Britain again taking a place among the leading nations after languishing for many years among the ranks of the also-rans. Her lawn tennis men and women captured some of the chief honors of the game, her golfers emerged from the doldrums, and her thoroughbreds managed to stave off notable foreign challengers in the flat and steeplechase classic races of the year.

No one will argue with the official figures which show that Britain's financial situation at the end of 1934 is healthier than that of probably any other country. There is every indication that this state of affairs will continue and that the budget will again be balanced. Only a new European or world war or a naval armaments race can prevent Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain reporting a considerable budget surplus in his address to the House of Commons next spring, in the view of experts.

With a $155,000,000 budget surplus on hand at the last national accounting in April, Chancellor Chamberlain was able to ease the taxation situation by lowering the income-tax and other taxes, thereby causing an immediate improvement in trade and gaining the thanks of the man-in-the street, who had had to bear crushing taxation during the bad years of the depression.

The year saw the third anniversary of Britain's abandonment of the gold standard and the continued confusion of those who had predicted that the country would go rapidly to the dogs as soon as the national currency was divorced from the yellow metal.

Astute management of the official Exchange Equalization Fund successfully withstood heavy pressure from Continental speculators who many times during the year raided the pound sterling in the foreign exchange markets, and the level of the pound sterling in the world's currencies remained fairly stable.

Principal events in the City, the financial heart of the country, mainly were interconnected with the U. S. financial policy throughout the year, with the stock markets reacting freely, up or down, to President Roosevelt's monetary experiments.

But on the whole the stock market did good business, especially in British Government "gilt edged" stocks, which toward the end of the year were boomed to unprecedentedly high levels as British and foreign investors bought heavily.

Many great schemes to reduce the total of unemployment were evolved and put into operation during the year. A new Unemployment Act—one of the major parliamentary events of the year—was brought into use, amending the old worn out legislation dealing with social insurance and setting up a new authority which was given powers to consider ways and means of bringing new groups of workers into the "dole" scheme.

But the average number of unemployed, while lower than for previous years, was 2,099,000 throughout the year, the second highest in Europe and exceeded only by Germany's estimated 3,394,000 jobless.

Analysis of the government unemployment and trade statistics reveal that there was more activity in employment and a considerable improvement in industrial conditions, but there is not the slightest doubt that ground for anxiety continues in this respect, and that the long continued depression exists, especially in the "depressed areas"—Scotland, the northeast British coast, South Wales, and parts of Lancashire.

It is for this reason that the Government has set up four commissions of inquiry to find ways and means of alleviating the unemployment in these areas. These commissions will get down to work early next year and much is expected from them, especially by the workers in the distressed areas who compose the bulk of the nation's unemployed.

Politically, the year contained few high spots. The Government spokesmen in and out of the House of Commons mouthed pious hopes that the peace of the world would not be disturbed and frequently drew attention to the work of the British Government in trying to maintain peaceful relations among the nations.

The National Government, with its huge majority in the Commons and Lords, had no difficulty in getting all its legislation through both houses and successfully dragged efforts to wreck its Sedition Bill, its Lotteries Bill, and its proposal for giving effect to the promise to grant India a new constitution.

Virtually alone among the country's statesmen, Winston Churchill, cherubic free lance politician, and Anthony Eden, Lord Privy Seal in the National Government, managed to enhance their reputations.

Eden's work as British delegate at Geneva called forth praise and appears to mark him out as one of Britain's rising statesmen; Churchill's barbed attacks on the Government on every possible occasion drew delighted applause from the sidelines.

Ramsey MacDonald's star appeared to be on the wane and there was considerable talk about his being elevated to the peerage and supplanted by "Farmer Stanley" Baldwin as leader of the Government.

As in other countries, the "shirt" came into prominence in British politics early in the year, when Sir Oswald Mosley, backed by the influential support of Lord Rothermere's chain of morning and evening newspapers, threatened to sweep the country with his newly-formed British Union of Fascists. Various events in the summer and fall, however, including the withdrawal of the Rothermere support, caused Mosley's stock to decline and the end of the year sees him and his party discounted in the political scheme of things.

Britain shared the general feeling of apprehension resulting from the assassination of Chancellor Dollfus of Austria and of King Alexander of Yugoslavia. There is little doubt her Government played a big part in preventing the European war which might easily have followed the latter killing.

European problems, India, unemployment, and the relief of agriculture appear destined to gain most attention from the Government, press and public next year. Britain will join with the United States and Japan in attending the scheduled naval conference which will consider the modification and/or extension of the Treaties of Washington and London limiting naval armaments, but there is little real belief that this conference will be successful.

Virtually all of Parliament's time will be devoted to the Indian question, consequent on the Government's determination to get its scheme for Indian constitutional reform through the Commons and Lords before the end of next year.

In summing up the year 1934 as it affected the British scene, perhaps the most striking fact which emerges is that, at a time when crowns and monarchies appeared to be at a discount in other parts of the world, the British Royal Family succeeded in strengthening its hold on the affections of the British nation.

Several events conspired to bring about this end. Perhaps the most important was the marriage of King George's younger son George, Duke of Kent, to the lovely Princess Marina of Greece, which was made the occasion for a spontaneous outburst of popular enthusiasm unprecedented since the war years.

No one would dare to say that 1935 will witness any slackening in the monarchist feelings of the British millions, for on May 6 King George and Queen Mary will celebrate the jubilee of their reign and there is no doubt that the occasion will call forth popular rejoicings on a vast scale.

DIED FOR HIS HORSE

STOCKHOLM — (INS) — Robert Forsberg, 70-year-old farmer, was driving a load of hay across a frozen river when the ice gave way and the horse and cart went under. By desperate efforts the old man managed to free his horse and bring it to land. Then he collapsed and died from heart failure almost immediately.

HELPFUL HUSBAND

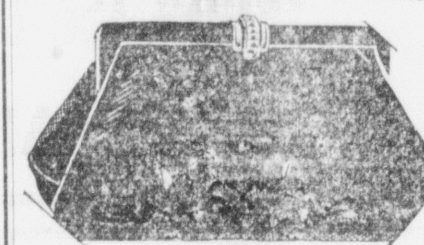

STOCKHOLM — (INS) — "Here I'll show you!" cried Mr. Eskil Karlsson when his wife started to wash up the dishes. He picked up the bread knife and reached for a cloth. Then he slipped and fell so that the knife ran into his chest. He is now on the danger list at a Stockholm hospital.

MODERN HOLIDAY DINNER
STILL GAY AND FESTIVE

Holiday feasts conjure up visions of the lavish viands of Dickens' day. The "gleaning boards" with their wealth of game, roast beef and rich puddings may be seen no more—but the modern holiday dinner still retains the gay and bountiful atmosphere of plenty, essential to the success of such occasions. There are fewer courses, a greater restraint in types of food offered, but the planning of Christmas dinner is still an important event and its cooking a real adventure in cookery. Here is a modern holiday dinner that retains many of the dishes we have grown to accept as part of the grand occasion.

Claret Cup
Mock Pate de Foie Gras Canapes
Roast Beef
Yorkshire Pudding
Whipped Potatoes
Celery Au Gratin
Tomato Jelly Salad
French Rolls
Plum Pudding
Coffee

Claret Cup
This recipe is from an old cook book. One quart bottle of claret, one bottle of charged water, one lemon cut very thin, four tablespoons of powdered sugar, quarter of a teaspoon of grated nutmeg, one liquor glass of brandy, one wine glass of sherry wine. Chill.

Mock Pate de Foie Gras Canapes
3 tablespoons mayonnaise
1 cup boiled calf's liver (finely ground)
¼ cup cooked mushrooms (finely ground)
Salt and pepper to taste.

Use the finest knife on the meat chopper for grinding the liver and mushrooms. Combine all the ingredients and blend thoroughly. Spread on canape biscuits and serve with a slice of lemon. This amount makes one cup of spread.

Roast Beef
Prepare for the oven by dredging lightly with flour and seasoning with salt and pepper; place in the oven and baste frequently while roasting. Allow a quarter of an hour for a pound of meat if you like it rare; longer if you like it well done. Serve with gravy made from the drippings of the pan or with a sauce made from the drippings to which has been added a tablespoon of Worcestershire sauce and a tablespoon of tomato catsup.

Yorkshire Pudding
Beef fat from roast
1 egg
½ cup milk
½ cup flour
¼ teaspoon baking powder
Use beef fat from roast to grease custard cups and put in a hot oven to heat. Put remaining ingredients in a mixing bowl and beat with a rotary beater four minutes. Pour into cups to ½ inch deep and bake 15 minutes. Reduce heat and leave in the oven 10 minutes longer. Turn off heat and leave 5 to 10 minutes or until cooked through. When well puffed baste once with beef fat. Serve on the platter with the roast.

Celery au Gratin
Cut the celery into small bits and cook in boiling, salted water until tender but not too soft. Drain and place in a baking dish with a rich white sauce, a layer of each and top with the celery, covering with a half inch top of buttered bread crumbs. Bake in hot oven until the crumbs are brown.

Tomato Jelly Salad
Make tomato aspic and mold in small cups. Just before serving remove from cups and hollow out centers. Fill the cups thus formed with Philadelphia cream cheese, whipped with mayonnaise and serve on crisp lettuce leaves with French dressing.

French Rolls
Scald one pint of milk. While hot, add one cup of sugar and one tablespoon of butter. When the milk is cool, add a little salt and half a cup of yeast or 1 compressed yeast cake; stir in flour to make a stiff sponge and when light mix as for bread. Let it rise until light, then punch it down with the hand and let it rise again—repeat two or three times, then turn the dough on to the molding board and pound with the rolling pin until thin enough to cut. Cut with a cookie cutter, brush the surfaces of each with melted butter and fold over. Let the rolls rise in the pans, bake and while warm brush over the surface with melted butter to make the crust tender.

Plum Pudding
½ pound suet
1 pound cleaned currants
½ pound seeded raisins
½ pound stale bread crumbs
¼ pound candied orange peel
¼ pound citron
4 eggs

½ teaspoon grated nutmeg
½ teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup dark brown sugar
2 tablespoons orange juice or grape juice or sweet cider
4 tablespoons flour.
Chop suet very fine and work with pastry blender until creamy. Chop currants and raisins and shred citron and orange peel. Mix fruit and sift over flour. Mix well and add to the suet. Mix and add bread crumbs, yolks of eggs well beaten, spices, sugar and fruit juice. Mix well and fold in whites of eggs beaten until stiff. Turn into buttered bowls or molds, filling molds not more than 2/3 full. Cover securely with heavy parchment paper or floured cloth and plunge into a kettle of boiling water. Boil hard for four hours. Boil again for two and one-half hours when wanted for serving.

Sauce for Plum Pudding
The yolks of 3 eggs
1 tablespoon powdered sugar
1 pint of milk
½ teaspoon grated lemon rind
2 small wine glasses of brandy
Separate the yolks from the whites of three eggs, put the yolks in a pan, add the sugar, milk and grated lemon rind and stir over the fire until the mixture thickens but do not allow it to boil. Put in the brandy and keep hot until time to serve.

Hard Sauce
Beat to a cream a quarter pound of butter, adding gradually a quarter of a pound of sugar, beat it until very white, add a little lemon juice or grate nutmeg on top. Brandy may be substituted for the lemon juice if desired.

Plain Cup Cakes
½ cup shortening
1 cup brown sugar
2 egg yolks
½ cup milk
¼ teaspoon soda
2 egg whites
¼ teaspoon vanilla
1½ cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder.

Cream the shortening and sugar together and add the beaten egg yolks to it. Sift soda, baking powder and flour together, beat egg whites stiff. Add milk and flour alternately to the first mixture and bake in a moderate oven for 20 to 25 minutes. A fudge icing on these is particularly good.

Ham Hash with Poached Eggs
2 cups leftover ham chopped
2 cups cooked potatoes

½ green pepper minced
½ medium onion minced
2 tablespoons ham drippings
½ cup diced celery
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon salt.
Melt the drippings and saute the green pepper, onion and celery. Mix with the chopped ham and potatoes, then add the seasonings. Add a little hot water if too dry. Shape into individual molds about 1 inch thick. Saute in drippings until thoroughly heated and slightly browned. Serve with a poached egg on each mold.

Veal Birds
Spread thin slices 3 by 7 inches cut from the upper leg of veal with finely chopped ham, roll, pin with toothpicks, brown in skillet, turning constantly. Cover and cook 40 minutes over low fire, occasionally turning. Serve with brown gravy.

Carrots with String Beans
Choose the very young tender carrots and scrape them lightly and if small enough do not cut them. If large, quarter them, lengthwise. Prepare the beans by splitting them lengthwise and cutting in 2-inch pieces. Cook the vegetables separately, drain well, then mix them and dress with plenty of fresh butter, salt and pepper to taste.

NICOSIA, Cyprus — (INS) — A 7-hour non-stop dance under the direction of a raving lunatic was the terrible experience of a Cypriot peasant. He was plowing his land when the lunatic rushed at him and forced him to strip and dance. The wretched man danced from 8 a. m. till 2 p. m. without a break. Then another peasant saw his plight and informed the police. They captured the lunatic.

HARD ON POLICE

BOSTON — (INS)—Boston's policemen are doomed to have cold hands this winter because their new type winter coats, which are only three-quarter length instead of the old style full size coat, have no pockets.

OX WINS "PENSION"

TIENTSIN — (INS) — An ox, the property of a Yangtsun peasant, has been awarded an "old age pension" for saving a boy's life. The peasant had offered the ox for sale. Just before the auction, the peasant's grandson, in taking the animal down to the river, slipped and fell in. He was able to keep hold of the rope which was fastened to the ox and the animal pulled him out. In gratitude, the peasant will keep the ox for the rest of its life.
